One tiger got out of the jungles of Uganda. It was a fierce tiger that killed all those who came for hunting him. Since the soldiers there could not manage to kill it, they sought the help of the UN and later India.

In India, the state of Kerala boasts of the bravest police force in the country. Two head constables of the force Minnal Rajappan and Idiyen Kuttanpilla were deputed to Uganda.

They entered the forest with sten guns and there was no news from them for the next two days. The Ugandan officials went in search of them, at least hoping to recover their dead bodies, killed by the tiger.

While searching in the jungle, they came across the two chaps torturing a dog saying, 'Rascal, aren't you the wanted tiger?' After being tortured for quite some time, the dog pleaded to let it go as he is not a tiger and only a dog. The Ugandan officials were flabbergasted and requested them to stop the foolishness.

They said that if given five more minutes they would make the dog crack under pressure and agree that it was the tiger.

One stingy Achayan entered the bar.
The waiter placed the menu. He scanned it thorough to find the cheapest drink.

At its bottom it was mentioned 'etc.' and no money quoted.
He ordered it. Waiter said no chance he won't get it there and the Achayan got angry shouted at the waiter asking why the hell then it was written there.

The waiter went and complained to the manager, who requested him to urinate and give a glass.
He obliged and the Achayan drank it with glee, gave thanks and left as no money was mentioned for that. The next day he turned up again and had another glass that too free, it went on for a week.

That day when he came, the waiter was on his weekly off and it was a waitress. He asked for 'etc.' and she said that he won't get it there. He got angry saying that he had been drinking it for the past whole week and ordered her to bring it.

She went and complained to the manager who told her what was happening and requested her to oblige. Hesitantly she peed, brought him a glass, Achayan drank it with relish and complained to the manager that from the whole week's 'etc.' only that day he got real delicious stuff.

The manager consoled the Achayan saying that till then he was served from the pipe and that day it was straight from the well.

Achayan came to the Waga border with two bags of sand behind his bike, the sentry there stopped him, examined the sand to find something smuggled in.

They did not find anything objectionable, packed it up again and sent him in. Every week he came with two bags of sand on his bike and the sentry let him in, always feeling something fishy. He lost his peace of mind after a year and requested Achayan to reveal what he had been smuggling into Pakistan.

Achayan asked him to give a guess, the sentry could not figure it out and he said that it was bikes that he smuggled in.

Achayan was about to die. He called his beautiful wife and told her that if she had any affair with anyone after his death he would be weeping and wailing in his tomb.

Achayan died and after twenty five years later the wife also died and came to heaven. Kalan told her that it was the custom there for the wife to fetch her husband for judgment if she came after his death.

She went and searched for him all over there and couldn't find him. Kalan said don't worry, they got a short cut method there to find him out and asked her as to what were his last words.

She told him that he said he would wail in his tomb if she had affair with any one after his death.

Kalan told his assistants to bring in the Achayan who was always weeping and wailing.

Achayan was looking the time at his watch on the fourth floor and it slipped and fell.

He ran down, stood there looking up and stretching out his hands as if to receive it.

His wife asked him why he was standing there like a fool praying and he told her that it was to receive his watch which was ten minutes slow.

Achayan was traveling by the flight 'concord'.
He wanted to shit very badly, went to the toilet and could not do anything as it was all switches and gadgets there.

He went and brought the air hostess who explained everything and Achayan was in a hurry and heard only half.

He shitted, pressed one switch, water came and washed his buttocks. Then he pressed another switch and towel wiped it.

There was one more switch, he pressed it and with a wild cry he fainted there.

When he opened his eyes his body was bandaged and he was on a hospital bed, the airhostess sitting near him.

He asked her where he was and what happened to him.

She said that Achayan was in a hospital in London. He pressed the wrong button, the one that removed the sanitary napkin of ladies.

Achayan was traveling onboard the 'concord.'

One French man put his hand out through the window and said that they were traveling on top of their country as he could touch the Eiffel tower from there.

One German said that they were traveling on top of their country then, as he could feel the coldness of his country on his hands when he put them out.

Achayan put his hands out, pulled it in and said that they were traveling over Kerala as he put his hand out there was his watch and when he pulled it in it was missing.

Achayans were notorious from time immemorial.

At the time of King Akber there were three terrible problems in the Mughal Empire. The first problem was a skunk, the most stinking animal which came out of the forest and roved all over the country. The smell was unbearable and it had to be driven back in to the forest to solve the problem.

The second problem was a tiger, man eater who caught and ate up the people.

The king did not want to kill the tiger, as it was the national animal. If its teeth were pulled out his problem could be tackled.

The third problem was a mighty witch, who made earth quake, flood, thunder, land slide etc. The king did not want to kill the witch either, as she was the symbol of the prosperity of the country. She was a virgin. To tackle her, her virginity had to be destroyed and she would become powerless.

King offered ten thousand gold coins to any one who solved the three problems. Travelers like Fahian, Whoang Tsang, and Iban Bathootha all came to solve the problems but did not succeed.

One Achayan heard about it and came to the Mughal Empire. The moment he landed there the skunk went back into the forest because he was stinking worse. The king was happy and promised him the money if he solved the next two problems.

Achayan agreed to tackle the tiger first. He entered the tiger's den and for half an hour they could hear his yelling and the crying of the tiger.

He came out bleeding, shirt and all torn and declared.
"I have tackled the tiger. Come on; show me the witch to pull her teeth out."

Achayan was roaming around the Museum compound in Trivandrum. He did not have a watch and wanted to know the time. He found two people sitting near a horse; went to them and asked them the time.

One of them lifted the balls of the horse with his hand and said it was five o'clock.

Achayan was taken aback and to know the secret of telling the time like that he roamed around for some more time and came back and found the men and horses same way as before and asked them the time again.

He lifted the balls with his hands and said that it was quarter past five. Flabbergasted Achayan confessed to him that he had traveled extensively, seen many things, but saying the time like that was the first time and asked him the secret.

He ushered Achayan to come and sit near the horse, lifted the balls and asked him to look in that angle, the clock on the tower of the University nearby became visible.

Achayan visited the doctor with his wife, complaining that there was big sound when he made love.

The doctor said that it was not possible. He told the doctor that he would to give it a try in the clinical back ground. The doctor agreed, he did that and the doctor said that he did not hear any sound.

Achayan said that he heard sound and requested the doctor to give it a try so that he can know the truth.

Doctor obliged and told him that he did not hear any sound; it would become all right with out any medication and sent them away.

That evening the doctor was drinking doctors' whisky with a friend in a bar and the same Achayan dropped in there.

Doctor told his friend what a fool the Achayan was and how he got a free chance to make love to his wife. Overhearing it Achayan told them that it was no wife, but a prostitute and not getting any convenient place he came to the doctors'.

Achayan took his cow for mating. The bull's owner was not there and it was the wife who operated the bull. She said that it was not possible that day as the bull had a few goes already, was very tired and asked him to come the next day.

Achayan paid her the money and asked her to permit him and he would make the bull do the job as he came from far and coming the next day would be difficult.

She agreed and Achayan rubbed the balls of the bull and it mounted the cow and he went away happy.

Next year for the next impregnation he came with the cow and that time the owner was there and he told Achayan to come the next day as the bull had few goes already.

Achayan told him that he came from far, offered the money and agreed that he would make the bull do it. He rubbed on its balls, it mounted the cow and the owner shouted at the Achayan abusing him, saying that it was him who told his wife about rubbing the balls when not ready for the job.

Achayan was taking part in a fancy dress competition; he dressed up like the devil with two horns, tail and all black, got in his car to drive to the venue. On the way the car broke down, he lifted the bonnet and tried to repair it, a terrible rain came soaking him and the make up was getting washed off.

He jumped into a near by building, which was a church and people were coming out after the service. He knocked down a lady who in panic requested him not to hurt her, though she was coming to the church for the past twenty five years she was on his side.

There was the international milking competition and Achayan was India's entry. The competition was held in the US, a standard size cow was given and they got to milk for one hour and the guy who milked the maximum would win.

It was an Egyptian who milked first and he got fifteen liters of milk, then a Pakistani who got eighteen liters and the next turn was Achayan's and he got only half a liter of milk even after one hour of milking.

Indians made a big fuss about some foul play and an enquiry commission was put into, to probe into the cause and their report was that the Achayan was wrongly given a bull to milk and in spite of it he milked half a liter.

Achayan was in the US, his wife left for holidays to India and to while away the time he visited a departmental store. There he found a gadget with a tag

‘you can do without your wife’’. Achayan got interested, bought it and took it home.

He was afraid to try it alone, got a young Achayan for company, who went to sleep soon. In the middle of the night Achayan put his organ in the machine and put on the switch.

He gave a wild cry and his friend found him with a button stitched to his organ. The machine was for stitching button with out the help of the wife.

Old Achayan was getting married to a shapely fashion model who married him for his money. She wanted to shock and kill him on the first night itself, wearing a nice gown revealing all her assets.

It was she who had a heart failure; Achayan came in wearing plugs over his ears and a clip on his nose. She asked him why all those gadgets. Sardar told her that he could not stand women crying out when he made love and that was the plugs in the ear and did not like the smell of burning rubber, the reason for the clip on the nose. Hearing it she collapsed and died.

A veteran Achayan was getting married again to a seventeen year old girl. She had a boy friend who told her that she would never have fun again in her lifetime and to make love for the last time.

They went to her apartment, as there were no condoms around, so peeled the skin of a sausage and used it instead. The damn thing got stuck inside; he tried to pull it out, did not succeed. He told her to forget about that and consoled her that the old Achayan would not find it out.

After the wedding Achayan had the first night and something was sticking around his organ. He asked her what it was and she told him that it was her maidenhead.

Achayan told her that he had seen quite a lot of maidenheads in his life time, but it was the first time, seeing a sausage company's name printed on it.

Achayans were having a meeting for the church festival. One elderly guy got up and said that the problem with Achayans was that they did not have 'common sense'.

There was big debate as to what common sense was. Finally it was decided to send two Achayans to America and Russia, the most advanced countries to learn about it.

They went; one met Trump and told him the plight about the Achayans, not knowing what common sense was. Trump told him that he would teach him with an example, in his family there were four persons, his wife, and two children. Trump asked him who the fourth person was.

Achayan thought for a while, could not figure it out and Trump told him that he was the fourth member and that was common sense. Achayan agreed to tell it to his fellows who sent him.

The Achayan who went to Russia met Putin and told him of their plight and Putin put his hand on the wall and asked Achayan to hit hard, he took all his strength and hit Putin's hand who pulled it off at the same time. Achayan hit the wall and fractured his hands.

Putin told him that it was common sense.
Achayan came back agreeing to show it to those sent him.

Both Achayans came back to Pala, a great meeting was arranged and the one who went to Russia got up. He asked a strong Achayan with big muscles to come forward.

It was an open air meeting place with no wall and hence he put his hand on his forehead to show common sense like Putin and asked the strong Achayan to hit him hard on the hand. He hit hard and the Achayan pulled his hands off.

He fell down fainting being hit on the forehead.

The one who went to the US told them how Trump taught him what common sense was. He said that there were four persons in his family, his wife and two children. He asked them who the fourth person was. None of the Achayans could answer and someone suggested it might be him.

He said that by no chance as it was Trump.

At the time of Nehru, Queen Elizabeth was visiting India.
Nehru went to entertain her, she sneered at his bald head.

He requested Achayan to go and give a try. He went and after each shot got in the bathroom, five times all together.

The queen was highly entertained, was unable to get up even and Nehru thanked the Achayan for saving the honor of the country and asked him how he managed.

Achayan told him that there were five Achayans all together and the others were hiding in the bathroom.

Achayan was visiting Dubai and he was frustrated by evening. Since he did no find any women available he approached a camel from behind.

The camel gave a kick with its hind leg, he fell down and with added vigor he made another approach. The camel gave a wild kick; he flew off and fell among a bush.

Some thugs were molesting a dame there and Achayan fought with them, chased them away and the ever grateful lady told him that she would gratify any of his wishes, since he saved her chastity.

He asked her then to come and catch the leg of the camel.

One tiger came out of the forest in the constituency of Achayan and people were scared. He told them not to worry, he would help them catch it and he will take the lead since he was the minister.

He killed a cow and wearing its skin as a disguise went and stood on the route, the tiger used to come out. He assured them that he would call them when the tiger made the debut.

There was no news from him for a long time and the people went in search. They found him lying on the ground bleeding. When they asked him what happened Achayan got angry at them asking who the hell it was that untied the bull, which came and charged at him from behind, thinking he was a cow.

Achayan was visiting the US and they showed him the latest computer, since he was a minister persuading him to buy one for Kerala.

He did not have much faith in computers and to impress him they asked him to ask it any question he wanted under the high heaven.

He had called home some time before and his father had gone tilling the field on a tractor.

He asked the computer where his father was right then and it displayed that his father was gone for fishing on a boat.

He sneered at the computer saying that it was wrong. They said that the computer would never go wrong as the whole information in the world was stored in it.

They gave an advanced program to verify the answer and the computer displayed that Achayan's father had gone fishing but his mother's husband was out tilling the field. They said the computer would never go wrong.

While visiting the US Achayan was requested to make a felicitation speech and if he got the mike he would speak for hours at a stretch and knowing his habit they asked him not to speak for more than half and hour.

Since Achayan could not control himself about his speech he requested his secretary to draft him a speech for half an hour.

He typed the speech; Achayan read it at the meeting, but to every ones' dismay, it took two and a half hours to get over. The audience was bored, some yawning, others sleeping, he shouted at the secretary asking for an explanation why the speech went that long.

Secretary told him that he had made a half an hour speech all right, but had kept all five copies that he typed which Achayan read on and on.

While visiting the US Achayan wanted to befriend the ladies there, but not knowing English was a hurdle.

He asked his secretary to write out a possible conversation.
He obliged and with that Achayan went for a party.

One young blonde was sitting near him and looking at the notes he said 'Hi' and asked her name, which she replied.

Then he asked her whether she was married and she said 'no'.

The next question in the note was 'how many children have you got?' and to that question the girl slapped him.

He knew something went wrong and shouted at the secretary and asked him to write out a proper conversation.

He modified the script and with its help Achayan at another party started conversing to his neighbor, a middle aged lady.

He said hi, asked her name and as per the modified version asked her how many children she had. She said 'two'.

There was the next question, 'are you married?' he asked that and the lady slapped him instantly.

Achayan's son was working in Delhi and he did not send any money home. To see him and to travel by train which he never had Achayan went to Delhi, in the first class.

He was chewing betel, sitting in the middle seat and when his mouth was full he spat out through the window. The window glass was down and the spittle fell on the guy who was sitting on the side seat. He was angry and gave a slap to Achayan. No one responded and so Achayan also kept quite.

The train reached Delhi he got out and went in search of his son. After so much of searching and not finding him, Achayan wanted to pee very badly and he got in to a side road and urinated there. It was written there in Hindi, not to urinate there.

One police jeep stopped there, asked him to get in, took him to the police station and asked him to pay four hundred rupees.

When he asked them for what it was the police told him that it was for urinating. He paid the money, did not ask anything further and got in the next train back and reached home.

His wife asked him about the train journey and he told her that it was very comfortable with soft seat, fan on top, but could not bear the slap that came at the station before Delhi. He thought that it was customary.

Then she asked him whether he met the son and got any money, he said that when he urinated once in Delhi the price was four hundred rupees and the son might pee two or three times a day and the salary he got may not be sufficient to pay for all that and they would send him some money.
